FIELD AND FARM. THE JONESBORO' FAIR.

Opening of the First Day.

JONESBORO', Sept. 22, 1875. Your correspondent left Knoxville at 2:25 A. M., and arrived in Jonesboro' in time to have an excellent breakfast at the Washington House, kept by that prince of hotel keepers, Capt. James Sevier. After breakfast your correspondent proceeded to the Grounds and everything was lively.

THE GROUNDS

are well situated, with a grove on the north side. The building being in the to get along without them. center, with a decline in every direction, enabling any one to see the speed ring at every point. The building has been discribed in the CHRONICLE in it is large, roomy and convenient.

Capt. Hoss, the worthy Secretary, was busy taking entries and the Su-perintendents of the different departments were kept busy in arranging the articles for exhibition. We found more on the ground than is usually found at a county fair on the first day of exhibition, and by far more entries had been made than on any previous year.

THE FLORAL DEPARTMENT

Was under the management of Prof. Presnell and Mrs. M. J. Grisham, and right well had they attended to their duties. Beautifully arranged festoons of evergreen and flowers encircled the inside of the building, and hanging baskets of flowers were suspended at every convenient point, in a tasty man-

Mrs. Dungan made one of the most beautiful floral displays we have ever seen—a display of every description of flowers and shrubbery in pots.

AROUND THE BUILDING Could be seen a number of agricultural implements, such as plows, straw cutters, corn shellers, etc., also some fine poultry, among which we noticed a coop of Poland ducks, owned by Mr. A. B. Bowman, of Johnson City, which are the most beautiful white ducks we have ever seen, and if we were going into the duck raising business we would not rest until we had purchased a pair.

Mr. T. A. Middleton displays as fine a ham as we have ever seen, which had been packed in meal. Mrs. Middieton displayed some nice tallow of her own rendering; also a stand of jellies of 42 varieties, nearly as fine an assortment as we have ever seen—we have seen it surpassed but once.

Mr. J. C. Smith displays a fine assortment of jars of fruit and seventeen varieties of jellies.

A large number of entries have been made in this depastment, and the ladies of Jonesboro', as usual, are fully aware of the importance of their department being well represented.

There are several specimens of butter as fine as can be made anywhere. The ladies of the Southern Presbyterian Church have a beautiful display of fancy work-bead work, embroidery and everything of that kind—and among them is a beautiful baby-suit; and right now while we are writing this notice an old bachelor is standing over us and admiring it, wishing in his heart he had occasion to purchase it. There is one consolation for him: "While the lamp holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return." He may yet find use for baby suits, for it is a good sign to see him repentant. The ladies are selling these articles for the benefit of the church. Success to

Mr. R. W. Elam & Son display a fine saddle and set of harness of their own manufacture. They will be hard to surpass by any manufacturer, and to surpass by any manufacturer, and on the ground, and Mr. Dorser, who have a displayed at the Eastern Division Fair.

Mr. L. W. Keen has a fine display of photographs, which can not easily be surpassed anywhere. We heard a gentleman from Richmond say that he had visited many galleries and he has never seen better photographs. Chas. F. Decker, of the Keystone Pottery, is displaying a large quantity of crockery ware.

Col. R. H. Dungan is making a fine display of grapes and garden vegeta-bles. He has on display the Isabelia and Catawba grape, beets, potatoes (sweet and Irish), corn, tomajoes, cucumbers, carrots, cabbage, parsnips, plants, and other articles.

Mr. Samuel Overholster, of Carter county, displays a coffee mill of his make, a patent for which has been obtained.

Mrs. J. L. Burts entered 75 varieties of apples, all of a very fine quality, being the best display of the kind we have ever seen.

Dr. Carr and brother made a fine display of jars filled with different varieties of fruit, preserves, &c. We noticed a fine lot of onlone of the Weatherfield variety, grown from the seed. Did not learn the name of the

This department is not as well represented, as yet, as we expected to see, but we learn that there will be an improvement to morrow. Yet there is a pretty fair display of ladies handipretty fair display of ladies handi-work such as quilts, counterpanes, homespun cloth, cotton goods, em-broidery of every description, needle-work, hearth rugs, and everything of that description. Our attention was called to some cotton goods by Mrs. M. Kicher, and _two-counterpanes, very beautiful in the design and fluish, by the same lady.

There was a splendid display neesee. There was a splendid display of grapes of every variety. The wheat crop was well represented, and fifteen or twenty samples of a very fine article of wheat was being displayed. The tobacco crop of this county was not forgotten, and a number of specimens of leaf tobacco were on exhibition.

Flour, corn, turnips, cabbage, pump kins were on the ground in the great show what they are doing in the agri-

Church, South,—which sang sev-of Capt. Twier, and there is no getting eral pieces; and if it had been possible for any school in the city to have taken the premium from them we would have liked to have heard them sing, for this school did so well that anything to have come out ahead would have been par excellence. The school was awarded the premium.

Next on the programme was a special premium of $2.50 for the best lady performer on the piano, organ or melodeon, accompanied with singing. The committee to award the premium was the same as decided on the Sabbath School singing, and consisted of Massre. School singing, and consisted of Messrs. A. W. Calloway, A. H. Hodge of Knoxville, and Mrs. Martha Duncan. Only two ladies contested—Miss Mattie Hoss and Miss Kate Brinkman. Both performed admirably, and it was with difficulty that the committee could make a decision, but Miss Brinkman
